

Monitoring the sedated patient

Presented by:
Anna Biddick, Dr Rohit Bedi
and Dr Nick Stretton

A formal education and training course that fulfils the mandatory DCNZ requirements for education and training in the Sedation Practice Standard from 1st October 2019.

This will enable you to gain certified competency to monitor sedated patients. It is designed for the whole dental team who monitor sedated patients, either with minimal experience or needing an introduction to capnography. It does not teach you how to sedate patients.

The course will involve a full day of lectures, demonstrations and hands-on training leading to certification.

Participants will gain an understanding of:

- The definitions of minimal, moderate, and deep sedation; and general anaesthesia.
- That the transition from complete consciousness through the various stages of sedation to general anaesthesia is a continuum and not a set of discrete well-defined stages.
- The risks associated with sedation.

And deeper knowledge in:

- Anatomy and physiology of the respiratory, cardiovascular and central nervous systems in relation to sedation.
- How to monitor the sedated patient – physical and physiological monitoring including the central nervous system, respiratory and cardiovascular systems, and necessary equipment – appropriate for the technique(s) and drugs being used, and the intended level of sedation.
- How to identify sedation-related complications; and when to advise the 'sedationist' or 'operator-sedationist' of any abnormalities or concerns, and initiate or assist in the management of a medical emergency.

Speakers:

Anna Biddick DipAppSc

Anna has been working in dental practices for 18 years. She has spent the last 7 years as a practice manager in a large group practice that provides well over 500 sedations a year. She is responsible for sedation team training to her 30-odd staff. Anna has vast practical experience from a non-clinician view-point.

Dr Rohit Bedi BDS, NZREX, PGDipHSc

Rohit has a special interest in providing care to patients with long-standing dental anxiety and patients with complex needs using advanced intravenous sedation techniques. He is a current member of New Zealand, Australian, UK and American societies for sedation and is actively involved in furthering his education in the field of sedation. He practices the full scope of General Dentistry.

Dr Nick Stretton BDS, MRACDS(GDP), FICOI

Nick has experience in many areas of sedation including general anaesthetic, oral, and intravenous sedation over the last 10 years and is an active education committee member of the New Zealand Society for Sedation in Dentistry. Nick is passionate about training and education for sedation and has a busy general practice. He has been involved with the Dental Council Practice Standard development and travels internationally to keep up with the latest sedation techniques.
